PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION:

This house, reportedly built in 1890, may actually date to the post-Civil War era. The two story, stucco covered house has an front end-gabled, asphalt shingled roof, side entrance, and a pair of French doors facing Skippack Pike. The house consists of the core, a single story, rear addition, also stucco-covered, and walled front porch, consisting of coursed stonework. The façade facing the pike is symmetrical with two 2x2 double hung sash windows located above the two glass French doors. There is no ornamentation. The side entrance originally had a gabled hood. Today it consists of a solid paneled door with single pane transom. Windows on the first and second floors are 2x2 double hung sash. Those windows, like the two attic windows above, are asymmetrical. The house appears to be in poor condition.

Associated Buildings: There are two outbuildings on the property: a stucco-covered, two bay garage with entrance extension, and a small, stucco covered shed. Both buildings have asphalt shingled, end gabled roofs.

Classification: Due to changes, such as the French doors, the house is Class II.
